This year's conference theme Turning Points: Change and Continuity in Judaism and Israel aims to put forward historic moments and critical junctures that Judaism and Israel have experienced during the historical process and by doing so creating a discussion platform on which the current effects of those junctures and moments on Israel and Judaism would be scrutinized. The program will include the traditional fields of Judaism studies as well as the issues regarding Israeli studies within the fields such as politics, international relations, history, sociology etc. The focus of the papers that would be presented is expected to be diverse: Zionism, Israeli culture and politics, Israeli-Palestinian Conflict, Hebrew literature, Education in Israel, the various interpretations of Judaism and its historical roots.

Having adopted an international and interdisciplinary approach with the target of assembling the scholarly works on Judaism and Israel in Turkey, the Program Committee aims to create a constructive forum during which researchers from various disciplines would gather and exchange ideas.
